The Weaving. She gazed at the weaving sadly— The warp and weft in the loom, Where the bright colored threads in the fabric Seemed always o'ershadowed by gloom,

And ever she saw the tangles
Of threads, so ofter astray,
And it grieved her heart sore that the
Weaver
Used only a few bright and gay.

So one day she cried in sorrow:
"O, tell me, Weaver, I pray,
Dott thou care if the threads are so tangled,
And so many somber and gray?"

I pray thou wilt weave me, Weaver, In warp and weft of thy loom. Only colors like tints of the Autumn, With never a shadow of gloom."

The Weaver worked on, in silence, Ut.)een by the eye of man, And he lovingly fashloned the fabric According to pattern and plan.

At last, when the web was finished, One late Summer evening tide, With the hands that had guided the weaving, He beckened her to his side,

And there, all complete, he showed her,
From every tangle free,
That the veb of her life had been weven
In heaven-wrought tapestry.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

Whatever your occupation may be, and however crowded your hours with affairs, do not fail to secure at least a few minutes every day for refreshment of your inner life with a bit of poetry.-Professor Charles Eliot Norton.

The Private of the Buffs.

By SIR FRANCIS DOYLE.

Sir Francis Hastings Doyle was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1810, died in 1888, He was educated at Eton and Oxford and was called to the bar in 1831. He was professor of poetry for ten years at Oxford.

During the Chinese war of 1869, a private of the 3d ("Buffs") was with some borning that the presence by the Chinese, and carried before a mandarin or other Migh official. They were ordered to perform the "kelow," i. e., lie prestrate before the mandarin. The lad refused and was killed.

The Third Regiment, nicknamed "The Buffs," because of the color of the regimental facings, is a crack British regiment. It is now-under the present "territorial" system, by which the numbers were abolished, and each regiment associated with the district of its origin, if possible—called the "East Kent Regiment."

It was organized from the historic "train bands" of the city of London with served with the Parliament in the civil war against Charles I. It has the privilege because of its origin, of being allowed to march through the city of London with "drums beating and colors flying," a privilege only shared with the royal marines.

Other regiments must ask permission.

Lord Elgin was the ambasador from England to Pekin. He was refused permission to proceed to Pekin to demand satisfaction for the murder of some British subjects, and the French ambasador was likewise denied. Hence the war, the subsequent capture of Pekin, the sacking of the summer palace, and the dictation of the terms of peace in the Chinese capital.

AST night, among his fellow roughs, He jested, quaffed and swore; A drunken private of the Buffs, Who never looked before, To-day, beneath the foeman's frown, He stands in Elgin's place, Ambassador from Britain's crown,

And type of all her race.

Poor, reckless, rude, low-born, untaught, Bewildered and alone, A heart, with English instinct fraught, He yet can call his own. Ay, tear his body limb from limb, Bring cord, or ax, or flame; He only knows that not through him

Shall England come to shame. For Kentish hop-fields round him seemed Like dreams, to come and go; Bright leagues of cherry blossom gleamed, One sheet of living snow; The smoke above his father's door

In gray soft eddyings hung; Must he then watch it rise no more, Doomed by himself, so young?

To his red grave he went.

Yes, honor calls! with strength like steel He put the vision by. Let dusky Indians whine and kneel; An English lad must die. And thus, with eyes that would not shrink, With knee to man unbent, Unfaltering on its dreadful brink,

Vain, mightiest fleets of iron framed; Vain, those all-shattering guns; Unless proud England keep, untamed, The strong heart of her sons. So, let his name through Europe ring-A man of mean estate, Who died, as firm as Sparta's king,
